UNION STATION ACCIDENT.

Little Girl Falls from the Stairway and Is Painfully Bruised.

Minnie Shelton, a little girl, who, with her mother, passed through this city yesterday en route to Knightstown, was painfully injured during her wait in the Union Station for a train. The child had become restless and was roaming through the building and finally found the stairs leading to the balcony from the south end of the station. She climbed on them, looking over the railing and in many ways trying to amuse herself. Shortly after 1 o'clock peoole who were in that part of the station were startled by a scream and upon looking around saw the little girl lying on floor with a large cut in her head. She had leaned over too far and lost her balance. The train caller was the first one to see her and, picking her up, carried her across the street to Bryan's drug store, where she was attended to.

STORY OF GORMAN'S FALL

HOW HE WAS BROUGHT INTO LINE BY SENATOR JONES

And Then Called a Traitor and Turned Down by the Populistic Element of Bryan's Followers.

A private letter received here from a member of the Democratic national committee, who attended the meeting in New York, held at the time of the Bryan demonstration, throws a good deal of light upon the existing troubles with which Senator Jones has to deal in managing the Demo-

When the Wilson bill was under consideration in the Senate Jones seemed completely under Gorman's control and was his ready tool for every purpose when the emasculation thing that Jones did when he returned to Washington from the Chicago convention was to pay a visit to Gorman, who had declined to attend the convention and was sulking in his tent, having some time previously unequivocally declared for sound money. In some unaccountable way Jones pursuaded Gorman that it would be to his personal interests to stay with the party, and made him believe that he could exert of their money a tremendous influence in swinging the Eastern Democrats to the ticket, and would then be in a position to practically control | tieman's silver millennium is reached. the destinies of the party, if it should be claring for the Chicago platform and ticket. Extracts from a Speech Delivered by Mr. Bynnm Three Years Ago.

The speech of W. D. Bynum, delivered in Congress Aug. 22, 1893, advocating the repeal of the silver-purchase clause of the Sherman law, has taken on a peculiar interest in this campaign for several reasons, among them the prominence attained by Mr. Bynum as a leader of the National Stewart and Jones and the fact that in the course of the speech Mr. Bryan, then a rather fresh and inconsequential member of Congress, was handled with neat and the speech of Senator Stewart delivered on

Mr. Bynum paid his respects to Bryan thus: "The gentleman from Nebraska in eloquent terms portrayed the giorious results that would accrue to the debt-ridden farmers of the West and the unemployed wage workers of the whole country when we shall have reached the silver standard. of that measure was in progress. The first | The mistake the gentleman makes, slight though somewhat serious, is in assuming that we would have a standard. There would be no more stability in the price of silver than there is now. Letter in Which He Justifies Bolting When Platform Does Not Suit.

The executive committee of the National Democrats has obtained a letter from Mr. Bryan which old-time Democrats are likely to regard as a justification of their action in not abiding by the actions of the Chicago convention. It purports to be a letter written by nominee Bryan to George M. Carden, of Dallas Tex., Feb. 18, 1896, and reads as follows:

KEELEY LEAGUE'S PLAN TO ASSIST INDIGENT INEBRIATES.

Wants States to Set Aside a Portion of Liquor License Fund to Pay Expenses of Treatment.

Two matters of importance to the Keeley League will come up for its consideration at the meting this morning. The committee on resolutions, which is composed of Trader, Bennett, Blewith, Norline and Filmore, will report a resolution providing that the league shall work to the end that laws be enacted in the various States providing that a portion of the revenue received from the liquor traffic shall be set aside each year to send indigent inebriates to some institution where they can be cured of the drink habit. This matter is not entirely new to the league, for through its efforts three or more States have already passed similar laws, and the reports, are that their workings are satisfactory.

The committee on constitution, composed of Messrs. Haskell, Mowbray and Mc-Reynolds, will report in favoring of granting charters to State leagues, conferring on State leagues much of the power and authority now vested in the national body. This matter will cause considerable discussion, for there is a strong feeling on the two sides of the question. The genial face and jolly manner of President Smith of the Keeley League, who took the chair for the first time yesterday morning, added considerable life and interest to the meetings of the convention. The woman's branch of the league held its meeting yesterday morning in the Senate chamber and nearly all of the delegates were present. A pleasant incident of the meeting was the conferring of honorary memberships of the league on the delegates from the Catholic Abstinence persons in sympathy with the work and full of encouragement. Among those read was one from Graham Taylor, professor of physiology in the University of Chicago; one from superintendent of the Illinois Christian Citizenship League; one from

Mrs. S. Burk Collins, of New Orleans. The spirit of the meeting seemed to be that more work should be done and the ladies of the league should ally themselves with all reform movements in their cities. Many of the ladies' societies gave short reports of their work during the year. One of them reported that they had paid the expenses and cured forty-three persons who were drunkards. Many of the leagues do not confine themselves to this work alone, but reports showed that flower mission work, good literature work and means of employment for idle workmen were provided in many instances. During the year $15,000 was raised by the woman's league and 600 patients obtained treatment through this means. The woman's league of Minneapolis alone raised $2,000 and sent forty-three men to the institute for treatment. The leagues also conduct children's and mothers' meetings and work in every practical branch of charity is carried on. Dr. Broughton, who is the woman's physician at Dwight, Ill., gave a talk on his work and related his experience with The league opposes the plan of the W. C. T. U. in founding homes for drunkards, as they say it takes away man's will, independence and self-respect when living in men's league in Representative was also well attended, and report of the executive committee was read and the word "vice" was pronounced in referring to drunkenness, words of opposition at once began and "disease" was substituted in place of it.

The report shows that during the year 167 cases of alcoholism and six opium cases have been treated, seventeen men have been restored to their familles during that time. The Keeley cure has been intro-duced into the United States army and the reatment of Indians has begun in the West. A great amount of literature on the subject has been sent out. Mr. Barry, the treasurer of the league reported that during the year the sum of $4.279.03 had been spent for the league's exenses. At noon when the meetings adourned the delegates met and had their otographs taken. hotel a number of the delegates expressed their pleasure at visiting Indianapolis and declared it was a beautiful city inneapolis continued her work to secure the convention next year, which was decided in the afternoon meeting. In the afternoon when nominations for next year's meeting place were called for the names of Minneapolis, Denver and Nash-ville were presented. Mr. Mowbray, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Pierce, of New York, presented Minneapolis and it secured the convention for '97 without any trouble against the prosperity and liberty of my A resolution passed saying that the con-country. A resolution passed saying that the contion place in 1898.

A good example of the practical workhonest-looking young man on the streets who had just arrived in Indianapolis under and Mr. Huston brought him to the convention. Mr. Mowbray, in one of his eloquent speeches, asked for money from the members of the league that the young man, who was penniless, could be sent to some Keeley institute. Immediately the members arose, both ladies and gentlemen, and crowded around the secretary's desk, two and three deep, where Mr. Mowbray took charge of their contributions. In a ittle less than five minutes the necessary $114 was secured and the man will be sent to the Plainfield (Ind.) institute. This money and sent to an institute since the convention began its session in Indianapolis yesterday morning.

The crowd at the opera house in the evening was larger than on the previous night, but many left before the programme was over, as both the previous one and the one last night were much too long for the general public, although interesting. A number of musical numbers were given during the early part of the evening, both instrumental and vocal, and three addresses by members of the woman's branch of the league followed. The mottoes of the league were hung over the stage and were interesting to the stranger. One read: "If not ashamed to get drunk, be not ashamed to get cured.' Others were: "Moral reform does not cure the drunkard anymore than it does the

consumptive." and "The drunkard is a sick man, not a criminal. The first speaker of the evening was Mrs. Ida C. Cole, the national secretary. She said: "There is no sociological problem in the country that does not take in the temperance question. There is no organization doing more to solve this problem than the Keeley League, which believes in no standard but the 'gold standard.' In our work we need all the boldness and love of John Knox and John the Beloved. The object of our work should be that of prevention; the work of cure and of prohibition. As long as humanity lives, so long will the traces of the drunken father live, but so long as there is a saloon on the corner our work of | Sept. 21. prevention will not prevent drunkenness Dr. Keeley has opened a new field for investigation and Bishop Newman has called it 'the greatest discovery of the nineteenth century,' for through his discovery the men, as well as the boys, are saved. I believe the cure is an answer to the thousands of prayers from wives' and mothers' hearts. Is it lawful to license a man to sell drink and then put a man in jail who partakes of that drink? Let us get aid of the one who sells also." Mrs. Cole closed with an appeal for all to interest themselves and study the Keeley League and the cure. Mrs. Lake, a delegate from the Catholic Total Abstinence Society, spoke on the need of a great public sentiment against drink and drink sellers, and said the public was gradually being educated to abstinence. "The silent man," she said, "is the one re-sponsible for the drink curse to-day as much as the drink-seller himself, for, although he is responsible to his God, we are cants and their dealers and users be put under the ban of public sentiment. Mrs. I. N. Ives was the last speaker of the eveninig and she emphasized the work

WILL ASK FOR STATE AID By," was led on the stage by Secretary Barry and introduced to the people.

G. A. R. Campfire To-Night. To-night the G. A. R. posts of the city will give a campfire to the Keeley soldier boys at Tomlinson Hall, at which many of the national G. A. R. officers will be present, and to which the public is invited. It is expected that all will be well repaid for attending this meeting. There will be many interesting talks by men who have been drunkards, but are now prosperous and influential.

BURGLARS IN IRVINGTON.

Mr. Coit's Alarm Was in Good Order, but the Switch Was Turned.

Burglars entered the house of Mr. Francis Coit, in Irvington, about 2 o'clock night before last. They were evidently intent upon making a paying haul, for they carried off everything they could possibly turn into money. The house was entered through a dining-room window, which was opened by slipping the catch at the top. Mr. Coit recently had his house fitted out with a most elaborate arrangement of burglar alarms, every window and door being connected with a large gong in the upstairs hall near his bedroom. He had arranged a cut-off near the front door for convenience when he came home late in the evening, which looked very much like a door bell and could be used as such when the rest of the house was not connected with the bells. For the last day or two they had been using it in place of the regular door-bell, which was broken. So it happened that on the night of the burglary the switch which put the burglar alarms in connection was not turned, and the burglar entered undisturbed. The house was ransacked from top to bottom. All of Mrs. Coit's dresses were taken from the closet in her bedroom. Mr. Colt was compelled to wrap himself in a blanket and borrow a coat and trousers from a neighbor. Even the children's clothes were taken. The burglars displayed their nerve in going through a dresser by the side of which a two-year-old baby slept. They, however, did it hurriedly, for they missed a case of valuable jewelry hidden in the back part of one of the drawers. Mrs. Coit lost a diamond pin and a number of valuable shirt studs

After a short devotional service in the morning Mrs. Ida B. Cole, the national secretary, read a number of letters from COTTON GETS 180 DAYS. Charged with Many Cases of Petty Thieving-A Pencil Peddler.

No mercy was shown William Cotton in Police Court yesterday, where he was tried on the charge of housebreaking. It was shown by the evidence that he is the man for whom the detectives have been looking on account of many cases of housebreaking which have occurred in the city lately. Judge Cox evidently believed him the man, as he administered a very harsh sentence. Aug. 24. Cotton was sent to the workhouse for 180 days and fined $200. Cotton will be remembered by many housewives about the city as the man who appeared at their doors with a bunch of pencils in one hand and with the other bound up in a cotton rag. Cotton would enter a house, ring the bell and if any one answered he would offer his pencils for sale. If there happened to be no one at home he would go to the rear of the house and from his alleged injured hand would draw forth instruments by which a pane of glass could be taken from the window. There have been several cases of this kind reported to the police, but they had been unable to locate the man. Saturday Miss Belle Rassman, 39 Union street, detected a man in the act of entering a neighboring louse in the way described. She reported the matter to patrolmen Folzenlogel and Richardson, furnishing them with a de-scription of the fellow, and it was this that led to the capture of Cotton. He was identified by the young lady as the man she had seen and by several others as the person who had offered them pencils for sale.

Johnson put in a bid to do the plastering of a new house which is being erected near the Big Four tracks on Sevtractor had a misunderstanding, which resulted in another man being employed. Naturally Johnson resented this, but he took a novel way to get even. After the new man had moved his tools to the house where the work was to be done Johnson went to the place and took them, so that it was impossible for the work to proceed. He claimed yesterday when arrested that he did it for a joke, but it was one that resulted disastrously for the perpetrator.

The bicycle was found, but Cantee claimed that he had not stolen it. He said that some time ago a white man called at his house and asked to be allowed to leave a wheel in his care for a short time. Everybody Should Study It. Of course, we mean the financial question in order to decide who should be benefited -the multi-millionaires of the East or the silver miners of the West. The poor man in his where-am-I attitude should clear his head by using the Home Brewing Co.'s delicious "Columbia" or "Extract of Malt," in order to vote intelligently. They are bottled, and the best for family use. Tel. 1050.
